1 in 5 employees within the workforce are tasked with the obligations of their day job and serve as a caregiver outside of work hours. This reality can lead to physical, social/emotional, financial, and general burden for all parties involved. Employers can play a critical role in supporting employees who are both a worker and a caregiver. Not only can the attuned employer provide a source of relief for the employee, but also exhibit a competitive edge through the acknowledgement and adaptation of solutions in the workplace.

Objectives:

- Understand the effect of caregiving on your employees and business
- The impact caregiving has on preventive health
- Considerations for your workplace strategy
- Leave with resources to support employees

This event is a precursor to an employee facing caregiving educational series that will launch in July.
