

Student Jobs in Sustainability

The Institute for Applied Sustainability (IAS) is excited to announce two new student employment opportunities for the 2025–26 academic year. Both positions are paid, part-time roles designed to provide students with valuable leadership and professional development while contributing directly to campus sustainability and resilience initiatives.

Student Engagement Lead

The Student Engagement Lead will serve as a bridge between IAS and the student body, connecting student organizations, amplifying student voices, and supporting sustainability events and projects across campus. This role offers hands-on experience in leadership, event planning, outreach, and sustainability programming.

$18.75/hour, 10–12 hours per week

Open to all majors and class standings

Anticipated start: September 15, 2025

Community Resilience and Leadership (CRL) Program Assistant

The Program Assistant will support the launch of IAS's flagship curricular initiative — the CRL Student Fellows program. This role will focus on program coordination, recruitment, marketing, and event support, including logistics for the summer field school. It is a unique opportunity to help shape a new program while developing professional skills in leadership and communications.

$20.00/hour, 10–15 hours per week

Anticipated start: September 16, 2025

Both positions are on-campus and offer opportunities for meaningful engagement, leadership growth, and direct involvement in advancing sustainability at SOU.

You can find both positions in the Workday Student Jobs Portal. For more information on how to apply, see <https://hrs.sou.edu/student-employment-opportunities/>
