

US National Security Policy Panel with World Leaders

Joseph R. Wood, Ph.D., serves at the University of Notre Dame Australia and has taught at the Institute of World Politics in Washington, D.C. as well as a variety of graduate seminars in Europe, focusing on moral and political philosophy.

He earned a Bachelor of Science from the U.S. Air Force Academy; a Master's in Public Administration from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government; a diploma as a graduate of the French Joint Defense College, Paris; and an M.A. and Ph.D. from the School of Philosophy at the Catholic University of America.

He is a retired Air Force colonel and had fighter operational and command tours in Europe and Asia. He served in the White House as Deputy National Security Advisor to Vice President Dick Cheney, with responsibility for all policy involving Europe, Eurasia, Africa, and defense issues.

He taught foreign and defense policy at the Air Force Academy; served at the Pentagon as speech writer for the Chief of Staff and Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force; and served in temporary assignments in the Joint Staff, the U.S. Mission to the Conventional Forces in Europe Talks in Vienna, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and NATO SHAPE Headquarters in Mons, Belgium.

After retiring from the Air Force, he was appointed a member of the career Senior Executive Service at NASA Headquarters.