

EILEEN ODA LEAF

During WWII, my Japanese American family was unlawfully imprisoned at Tule Lake Concentration Camp.

With the rise in Asian hatred and violence, I use art as a way of expressing this continued cycle. The painting on the right is currently on display at the Ontario Museum of History and Art.

The painting addresses the complexity of the unlawful-imprisonment: its imperfections, complexities and interpretations.